

Use this form to explain why you cannot turn in your driver license, learner permit or license plates to DMV.

Your license and/or registration may be restored to you after you serve a suspension or revocation period. Your compliance with the suspension or revocation normally begins on the date you give this form to DMV. If the effective date of the order is later than the date DMV receives this form, your compliance begins on the effective date of the order.

Instructions:

- Provide all the information requested below. Please print your name and mailing address exactly as they are printed on your driver license, learner permit or vehicle registration.
• Enter a checkmark in the box next to each of the items below that you cannot turn in to DMV.
• In the "Explanation" section, explain why you cannot turn in the items that you select below.
• Sign your name in the "Customer's Signature" box, and return this form to any DMV office.
• Filing this form will invalidate the items that you check below (documents and/or license plates). If you find your suspended/revoked driver license, learner permit or license plates after you give this form to DMV, you must immediately turn in any items that you find to a DMV office.
