

INSPECTION GROUPS AND FEE CHART

Effective January 1, 2011

The maximum gross weight (MGW) is the weight of the vehicle, as indicated on some vehicle registration certificates. The MGW is used to determine the applicable safety inspection, and to determine if a non-exempt diesel-powered vehicle is subject to a diesel emissions inspection. The seating capacity is the number of adult passengers that may be transported in the vehicle, as indicated on some vehicle registration certificates. The seating capacity is used to determine the applicable safety inspection.

After the appropriate safety and/or emissions inspection is performed, the inspection station may charge a fee that may be less than, but shall not exceed, the maximum fees listed on this chart. The inspection station may charge such fee(s), regardless of whether the vehicle passes or fails such inspection(s). A reinspection fee may be charged only when the vehicle is removed from the station by the motorist and returns for reinspection. If a vehicle is presented for reinspection within 30 days of the rejection, the complete inspection of only the failed safety or emissions portion is required. If a vehicle is presented for reinspection over 30 days after the rejection, a full inspection of both the safety portion and emissions portion must be performed, even if the vehicle had been rejected for only the safety portion or the emissions portion of the inspection.

* Registrants of vehicles with an MGW over 10,000 pounds and under 18,001 pounds may request a Heavy Vehicle Safety Inspection, receive the Heavy Vehicle Safety Inspection certificate, and be charged the Heavy Vehicle (Group 2) inspection fee.
